Summary of Legislation: This bill provides that a juvenile court may create a preventative program for at-risk children (program). The bill allows a court to appoint program staff, a guardian ad litem (GAL) or court-appointed special advocate (CASA) to implement, coordinate, and carry out the purposes of the program. The bill also provides procedures for program staff, a GAL, or a CASA participating in a program. The bill provides civil and criminal immunity to a person who: (1) requests that a child participate in a program; (2) provides information concerning a child to program staff, a GAL, or a CASA; or (3) participates in a plan for an at-risk child in a program.

Effective Date: July 1, 2011.

Explanation of Local Expenditures: Summary: This bill may potentially increase local expenditures to the extent (1) a juvenile court elects to create a preventative program for at-risk children, and (2) the court elects to assign guardian ad litem or court-appointed special advocate representation to youth involved in at-risk programming. The average cost per child who receives GAL/CASA representation under the current system is approximately $580 to $800 annually. Total increases in local expenditures are indeterminable.

Additional Information:

Under the bill, juvenile courts are authorized to create preventative programs for at-risk children. Local expenditures may increase to the extent juvenile courts elect to implement preventative programs for at-risk children which require additional local funding. Actual increases are unknown and depend on the decisions of local juvenile court administrators.

Additionally, the bill allows a juvenile court to assign a GAL/CASA representative for a youth who is participating in a preventative program for at-risk children. This may increase the workload of GAL/CASA representatives to the extent they are assigned to at-risk youth. Actual increases in workload are indeterminable.

The Division of State Court Administration reports there are not enough GAL/CASA representatives to provide representation to youth in preventative programs even if the representation was at the option of the court. As of December 2010, there were approximately 3,000 children in need of services (CHINS) waiting for GAL/CASA representation. Currently, GAL/CASA representation is not required until a child is determined to be a CHINS. The average cost per child who receives GAL/CASA representation under the current system is approximately $580 to $800 annually. Actual increases in local expenditures are indeterminable.
